Key Active Ingredients that Set Vital-Coat Apart from the Competition:

Chia is a very rich source of essential omega-3 fatty acids and antioxidants.

Methionine is the amino acid most often denatured or lacking in commercial diets. Methionine is so important to hair and skin health and function, it can be considered the "water" of the amino acid world for the proper survival of all the genetically predetermined characteristics of the skin and hair coat.

Biotin is a major component in the natural hair manufacturing process—it is essential to not only grow new hair, but it also plays a major role in the overall health of skin and nails.

Zinc (Zn) is a component of many metabolic functions and plays a vital role in hormone secretion, especially those relating to growth, reproduction, immuno-competence and stress response, immuno-competence and stress response. Zinc is involved in the process of keratin generation and in collagen and skin nucleic acid synthesis.

Lecithin: Complete Coat is abundant in the phospholipids that are universal naturally components of living organisms.

You owe it to your pet to know what nutrient is actually available to your pet and not what nutrient is simply consumable.
